Wm. B. Martin, in the Court of Law and Chancery, to-day denied the application made for the appointment of a receiver for the Modern Puritans, and also denied an injunction restraining the American Guild, with which the Modern Puritans was recently consoildated, from paying out in general death-benefit claims moneys paid into the trensury of the Guild by the Moddated, from paying out in general death-benefit claims moneys paid into the treasury of the Gulid by the Modern Puritans.

The court did grant an injunction restraining the old officers of the Modern Puritans from acting in any way for the Puritans as a body, this having been asked for the purpose of preventing the officers from now calling a meeting of the Supreme Council of the Puritans for the purpose of ratifying the acts of the executive committee council in merging the order with the American Gulid, though the granting of this injunction was declared to be of no effect for the reason that the defendant Puritans' officers made the public announcement that they had no idea of calling a meeting of the Supreme Council, or otherwise acting for the Puritans, which have been merged with the Gulid, and do not now exist as an order.

Judge Martin, in rendering his decision, said that the receiver and injunction against the American Guild was refused at this time for the reason that the insolvency of the Anyerican Guild nor any of the other defendants was alleged, and the receiver and injunction was refused at this time for said reason; but that upon proper proof coming before him he would at any time take up a new mortion for the appointment of a receiver and the granting of a further injunction.

of Virginia in the case of J. A. Wilk-inson, of Bristol, against the Norfolk and Western Rallway Company, a case which was instituted in the Law and Chancery Court at Norfolk two years age, will be of Interest to shippers, not only in Virginia, but throughout the country, since it sets a new precedent with reference to responsibility for delays in shipments consigned to the care of common carriers. The point decided is said to be a new one and hitherto unadjudicated. The action arose over a shipment of lumber from Bristol to New York, by way of the Norfolk and Western Rallway and the Old Dominion Line. The plaintiff was without means of ascertaining proof as to where the delay in this shipment occurred, but was able to establish that there had been a delay, and also that because of the delay in was deprived of selling the lumber, at the price he was to receive.

In deciding this case, the court held that on proof of delay in delivery a prima facie case is made out against the initial carrier, and that the burden of proof rests on it to show that the delay was from cause for which it was not responsible. Justice Cardwell, who delivered the opinion, said in partic. "It would be a denial we without a shipper in such, where, from the very nature of the case, he is powerless to traction concerned, and where, perhaps, by agreement between them, each declines to introduce evidence to establish its own freedom from negligence, because the establishment of this freedom them cach declines to introduce evidence to establish its own freedom from negligence, because the establishment of this freedom of the one would place the fault on the other."
